

ALAN JANSEN

“Coaching is a dialogue that generates ideas and then focuses on action.”

Alan brings insight, humour clarity and presence to his approach. He has an easy way of enabling clients to crack difficult problems.

Experience

Alan was born in Cape Town and has studied and taught in the UK and USA. He is married and has three children.

Alan completed school during the height of the apartheid era. Overcoming the obstacles he faced as a man of colour he was able to obtain work in the engineering field for 10 years rising to a senior manager position. He subsequently became a university lecturer and deepened his studies in the Behavioural Sciences and Religion.

For the past 5 years Alan's academic interests shifted to leadership studies and he became involved in directing a MA in Organisational Leadership run in Africa by Eastern University, USA. In between coaching assignments he still enjoys teaching on this programme.

Since the beginning of 2003 Alan has focussed on leadership development with a special emphasis on coaching as an intervention.

Professional Expertise

Alan has supervised an MA (Organisational Leadership) and has lectured on MA programme (Organisational Leadership) for Eastern University. He currently facilitates coaching modules at University of Cape Town (Graduate School of Business) for MBA students.
